Introduction/Rationale of the Study

An organization can be classified as non-profit if it promotes charitable, educational, religious, scientific and literary, and cruelty prevention causes. In short, it must provide the public with benefits ("Nonprofit Organization", 2017). Non-profit organizations are charitable organizations created for public serving the public, promoting safe environment, and involvement in the society (Erdem, 2004). They exist because they serve a greater purpose- to lend a helping hand to those who need it the most, promote advocacies, unite people in the society and provide civic duties to people. Helping communities, supporting a cause, and just simply making an impact to society are just few of the many purposes of non-profit organizations. The backbone of these kinds of organizations is the service to the community.

In the advent of the modern technology era, people began to develop new ways of communicating, collaborating, and completing their tasks (Herranz, Díaz, Díez, & Aedo, 2013). A web portal is a uniquely designed website that often provides access for information. Web portals are accessible from multiple platforms such as mobile phones, personal computers or any electronic devices. There are many ways to utilize the advantages of a web portal; like reaching out to a variety of audience, and volunteers are the audience that the researchers intend to reach. Websites such as VolunteerMatch.org, which helps various organizations across the globe, connect to volunteers and vice versa and other sites like iVolunteer.ph and Volunteerinternational.org takes advantage of the World Wide Web to reach out to volunteers for their organization.

Volunteers are the people who wants to help the community or a certain cause without asking anything in return ("Quick guide to volunteering", 2017). They are very valuable resources in the community (Chien, 2017). Through the web portal, volunteers could reach the organizations that needs a helping hand. For the past years, organizations have been looking for volunteers through radio announcement or through printed-paper campaigns. Now through modern technology, organizations can find volunteers in posting their platforms online or announcing their programs in their respective social media accounts (Esparcia, 2015).

The study intends to reach a larger scale of audience through creating a web portal that has the functionalities to reach out and to be reached out. The main purpose of this study is to develop a web application that will bridge non-profit organizations to potential volunteers or future members of their organizations. The researchers have established the need to provide a portal that will serve as a venue for these organizations to promote their advocacies, mission, and their passion to contribute to society and at the same time be able to gather people locally to help them in their social work. The researchers have opted for this kind of system due to the belief that this proposed project will be relevant to the society; the intention of reaching out to people in order to reach out to others in a wider scale is what inspired the idea of this project.

System Description

VO: A Web Portal for Local Volunteers and Non-profit Organizations with GPS and Email notifications is a web- based system that will bridge the organizations and people who wishes to volunteer. Furthermore, the proponents will incorporate the use of GPS and Email notification. The proponents decided to develop a system that would be beneficial to the society. The proponents will use XAMMP and native PHP as a framework and mySql to store the data in developing the project.

Types of User:

Design Model

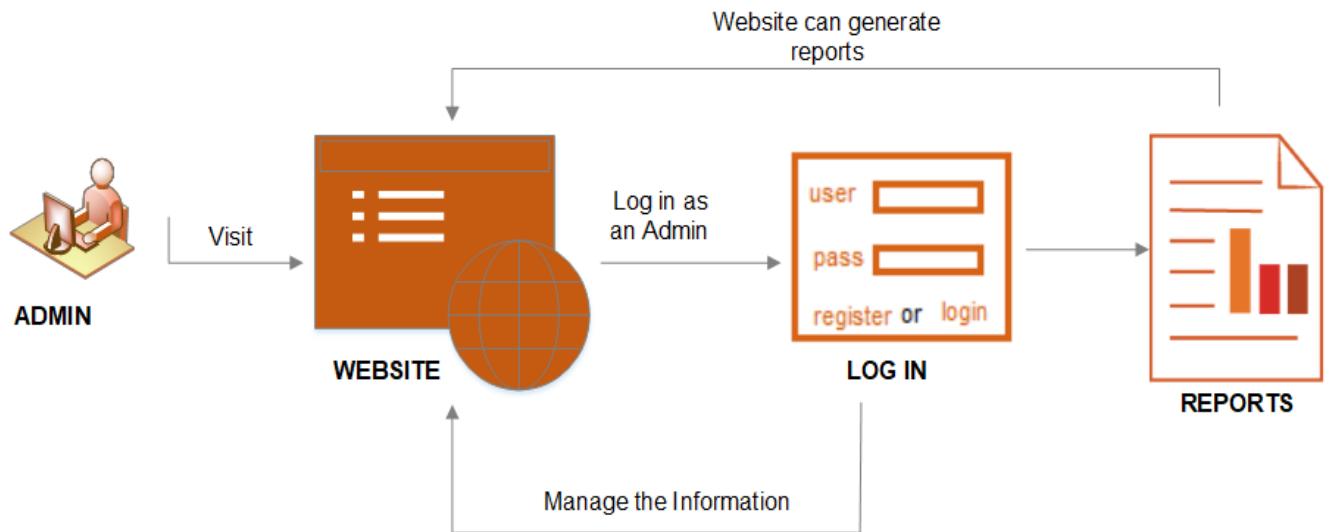

The system implements the incremental development process as the guiding principle in reaching specific milestones towards the creation of the system. The system will let the administration manage accounts of the volunteers and the organizations that are registered in the system. The system will also verify the account of the non-profit organizations. The volunteers that are registered in the system can suggest events or activities; they could also pre-register to any event or activity that interest them and they can view any activities or events that the non-profit organization has arranged. The Non-profit Organization can create an account to the system and they could create an event that can also be viewed by the volunteers

System Flow/Development Process

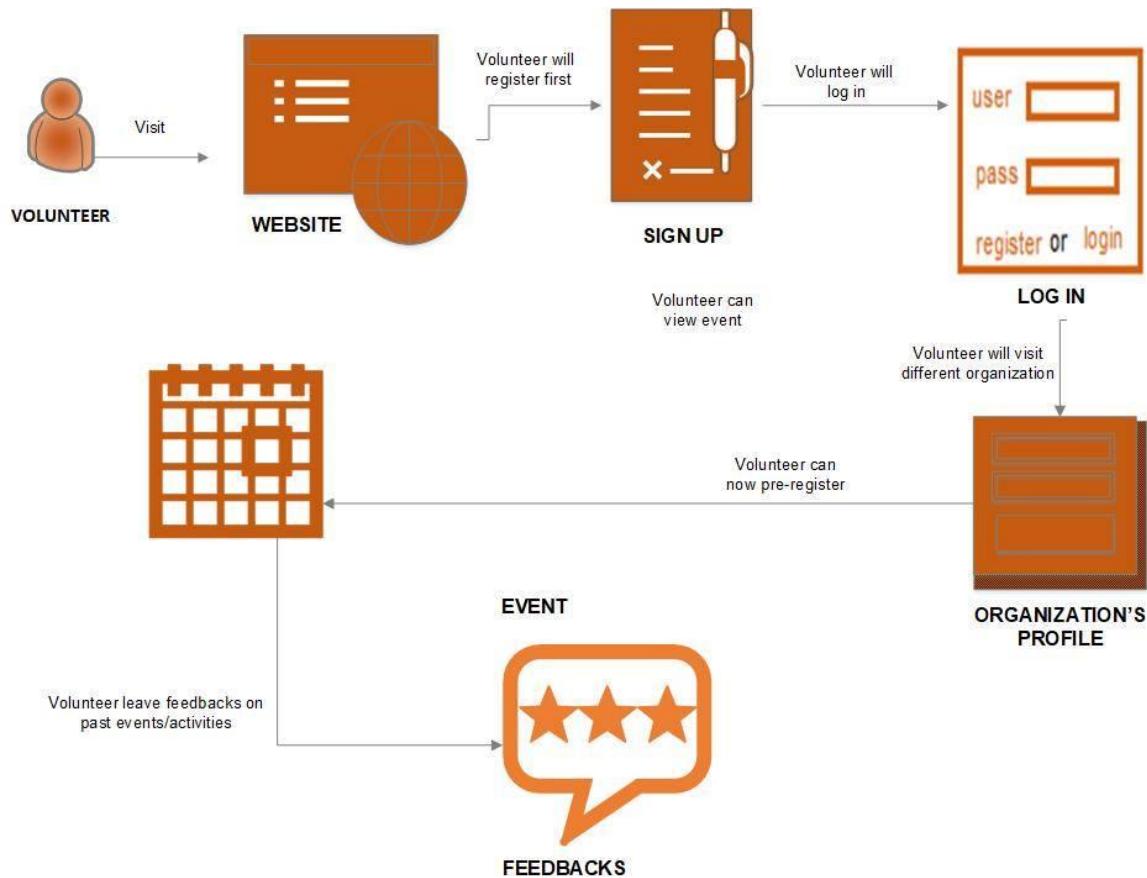

There are (4) components that are to be develop in developing the VO: A Web Portal for Local Volunteers and Non-profit Organizations with GPS and Email notifications. First, is the development of the Admin module that includes managing all the user and verify the organization. Second, is the volunteer module which includes registering and updating profile, pre-registering to an even/activity, suggesting activities, respond to event an invitation, pre-register to a specific event/activity, following an organization, posting feedback to a specific organization, and volunteer a resource. Third, organization module that includes registering and updating profile, creating and updating event/activity, send event invitation to volunteers who fits a specific criteria basins on their occupation and interests. And lastly, the report module in which user can generate various reports. User can also save the exported CSV of the generated reports.
